ORDER
ON MOTIONS FOR
SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Each party filed a motion for summary judgment.

From the briefs, exhibits and arguments presented, the Court enters the following

ORDER

Each party's Motion for Summary Judgment is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part.

RATIONALE

The Parties raise the following issues and arguments:

Plaintiffs (Irrigators):

The provisions in SB262 violate Article II, §18 of the 1972 Montana Constitution, because they provide immunity to the state, or its agents or employees, and constitute a statutory amendment of the constitution without the required two thirds vote of each house of the legislature.

1 The Tribes:

- 2 1. The statute grants immunity to the Water Management Board (Board), which is 3 created by the Water Compact agreement. The Board is not a political 4 subdivision of the State of Montana, so Article II, §18 is not violated.
5 2. A statute is presumed to be constitutional.
6 3. If one or both immunity provisions are unconstitutional, each unconstitutional
7 provision should be severed from the statute, rather than void the entire statute.

8 The State:

- 9 1. A statute is presumed to be constitutional.
10 2. Plaintiffs lack standing to bring this suit, because there is not a justiciable
11 controversy ripe for decision.
12 3. The first provision at issue is a limited waiver of sovereign immunity; new 13 immunity language just acts as a limitation on the waiver, and does not 14 constitute a new grant of immunity to the state.
15 4. The second provision at issue does not apply to political subdivisions of the 16 state, and therefore Article II, §18 is not violated.
17 5. Any unconstitutional provisions should be severed, pursuant to case law
18 precedent, and the severability language in Administrative Ordinance § 1-1-113.

19 Provisions Allegedly Unconstitutional:

20 Article II, §18 is the state constitution's waiver of sovereign immunity for suits against the 21 State of Montana. It states:

22 Section 18. State subject to suit. The state, counties, cities, towns and all 23 other local governmental entities shall have no immunity from suit for injury
24 to a person or property, except as may be specifically provided by law by a 25 2/3 vote of each house of the legislature.
26

1 The contested issues herein derive from Article II, §18, as it relates the following two 2 provisions in the Water Compact which was codified by the 2015 legislature in SB 262:

3 #1: Waiver of Immunity. The Tribes and the State hereby waive 4 their respective immunities from suit, including any defense the 5 State shall have under the Eleventh Amendment of the constitution
6 of the United States, in order to permit resolution of disputes under the 7 Compact by the board, and the appeal or judicial enforcement of 8 Board decisions as provided herein, except that such waivers of 9 sovereign immunity by the Tribes or the State shall not extend to any 10 action for money damages, costs, or attorneys' fees. The Parties
11 recognize that only Congress can waive the immunity of the United States 12 and that the participation of the United States in the proceedings of the 13 Board shall be governed by Federal law, including 43 U.S.C. 666.

14 #2: 1-2-111. Immunity from Suit. Members of the Board, the 15 Engineer, any Designee, any Water Commissioner appointed pursuant
16 to Section 3-1-114 of this Ordinance, and any Staff shall be immune
17 from suit for damages arising from the lawful discharge of an official 18 duty associated with the carrying out of powers and duties set forth in 19 the Compact or this Ordinance relating to the authorization,
20 administration or enforcement of water rights on the Reservation.

21 Background Facts

22 Senate Bill 262 was submitted to the 2015 legislature to implement the water agreement
23 between the state, tribes, and federal government, generally known as the Water Compact. The 24 Water Compact requires approval by Montana Legislature, Tribal Council, and Congress.

25 ///

1 The tortured legislative history of SB 262 is relevant to the question of legislative intent
2 which was raised by some of the parties here. As accurately set forth in Plaintiffs' brief:

- 4 1. February 26, 2015, the Montana Senate passed SB 252 on a 31-19 vote (62%).
- 5 2. April 14, 2015, House Speaker Knutsen ruled SB 262 provided the state with immunity
- 6 from suit, and therefore required a two thirds vote of each legislative house.
- 7
- 8 3. The same date, the Montana solicitor general's office issued a letter opinion, generally
- 9 opining that the Montana Constitution waiver of sovereign immunity had been largely
- 10 "drained of any significant meaning", and that the state is already immune from monetary
- 11 damage lawsuits. The Solicitor seemed to focus only on the first provision at issue here, and
- 12 did not address the second provision at issue. (Exhibit 1, Plaintiff's Brief). 1
- 13
- 14 4. April 15, 2015, the House Rules Committee upheld the Speakers ruling.
- 15 5. April 15, 2015, Representative Essman proposed an amendment to remove "or the state"
- 16 from the bill. In other words, the amendment would have removed the immunity provision
- 17 that would give the state immunity in SB 262. The amendment would have removed the
- 18 constitutional question.
- 19
- 20 6. April 15, 2015, the House voted 53-48 to overrule the findings of the Speaker and the
- 21 House Rules Committee which had ruled that a 2/3 vote was required.
- 22 7. April 16, 2015, the House voted 53-47 (53%) to pass SB 262, and thereby approve and
- 23 adopt all provisions of the Water Compact, and including immunity provisions.

25 _____
26 1 As explained in this Court's December 2, 2015 Order Denying Motion to Dismiss, the solicitor general's office misunderstood the continuing vitality of the Montana Constitution's waiver of sovereign immunity, and the meaning of MCA 2-9-305.

ANALYSIS

This controversy is broader than the limited scope of this lawsuit. 2

Most issues are, however, not before this Court in this lawsuit. Ultimate determination of ultimate water rights is in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Montana Water Court. The Montana Water Court is currently the only federal, state or tribal court which has jurisdiction over all these parties and over all issues pertaining to ownership of water rights. This case is limited to the question of the constitutionality of the two provisions quoted above. This case is unlikely to resolve the larger controversies.

2 Statements in various pleadings or forums have raised numerous questions about the constitutionality of the statute and Compact, such as whether they violate Article II, §16, Article II §17, Article II, §26 or Article IX, §3(3). The latter provision states that all unappropriated water belongs to the state; the Compact appears to eliminate that constitutional provision, and instead provides that all that water belongs to the tribes.

The Compact and SB 262 have been also controversial regarding the constitutional guarantee of full legal redress, and a remedy afforded for each wrong committed by the state or an individual, regarding the acts of the Water Management Board (the Board), which is purportedly a kind of hybrid entity variously described herein as a quasi-sovereign (clothed with sovereign immunity) but at the same time not a part of any of the contracting governments. The Board is comprised of state and tribal appointees, and their appointee. The governments contend both that it is not a subdivision of the sovereign state or tribal government, but it is clothed with all or more of the immunity which either entity has. Each government denies legal responsibility for the Board, while the two governments create and effectively control the Board by holding the power to appoint and remove its members. This Board is a legal creature never apparently seen before. The Compact and SB 262 vest the Board with extraordinary power to grant, permit, deny or change water use for an individual, and create groundwater protection areas. It will have power over a broad geographic area and over tribal and non-tribal individuals, property owners, irrigators, businesses and governments. Whereas now a party could bring an action in state court for damages, or Montana Water Court for determination of water rights, the new statute 1) would eliminate monetary lawsuits against the state, and the Board and its members and staff, for tortious or other unlawful conduct and 2) eliminate the water user's right to contest a change or denial of the user's historic use, or water right, in the Montana Water Court (a right which previously existed according to state and federal law). Upon passage, the only legal remedy would be to go to either state or tribal court if both parties agree (for declarative ruling, not damages). Assuming both parties would seldom agree on state or tribal court, the default forum would be federal court. An obvious problem with that is that federal courts do not appear to even have subject matter jurisdiction to entertain such cases under current laws. Given the case load of the nearest federal district court, it is hard to imagine the federal judiciary being proponents for congressional expansion of their jurisdiction so the federal district court can, in effect, become the new Western Montana water court. The limited "remedy" outlined in the Compact thus appears to be illusory. It may never exist as postulated.

It is therefore not difficult to understand the strong emotions evoked in some quarters by this legislative action.

1 Plaintiffs' Summary Judgment Motion

2 Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment is denied regarding provision #1 above, and 3 granted regarding provision #2.

4 Regarding provision #1, the language is admittedly confusing.³ The apparent intent
5 indicates an agreement by the state for a limited waiver of its sovereign immunity, under the 6 Eleventh Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which prohibits the state being sued in a federal 7 court. The waiver is limited to certain types of suit, and does not include a waiver of state
8 sovereign immunity for suits in federal court for money damages for unlawful acts of the Board or 9 its agents. Before passage of SB 262, the state already had immunity from such suits, pursuant to 10 the Eleventh Amendment. The state could not be sued for such monetary or other suits in federal 11 courts, (though some state agents could pursuant to certain limited congressional acts such as the 12 civil rights laws in 42 U.S.C.§1983). Article II, §18 of the 1972 Montana Constitution was just a 13 waiver of sovereign immunity for monetary suits against the state in state courts. The immunity 14 language in provision #1 of SB 262 does not grant any new immunity to the state, it merely 15 operates as a limitation on this new waiver of sovereign immunity.

16
17 Regarding provision #2, the Court agrees with Plaintiffs. This is not a close call. The 18 provision creates a new sovereign immunity for the state, and for its agents or employees. The 19 conclusion is clear by resort to either facial interpretation or legislative history.

20 At present, neither the state nor its political subdivisions are immune from suit in state court
21 for monetary damages for injury to person or property. Such immunity was waived in Article II, 22 §18. As with any employer or master, the state and its political entities are legally responsible for 23 its agents and employees acting within the scope of their duties. These agents were also 24 individually subject to judgment before the passage of MCA 2-9-305.

³ The language could also be read to waive immunity for suits against the State in Tribal Court. Because the State would have to agree, on a case by case basis, that does not appear to be a blanket waiver.

1 The State initially argued this waiver of sovereign immunity was eliminated (or “drained of 2 any significant meaning”) by MCA 2-9-305. That statute does not eliminate state legal
3 responsibility. The statute does just the opposite: it recognizes and affirms that the State is legally 4 accountable for the acts of such agents:

5 “...Except as provided in subsection (6), the employer shall pay all 6 expenses relating to the retained defense and pay any judgment for 7 damages entered in the action... MCA 2-9-305(3).

8 The “employer” referred to is: “...a state, county, city, town or other governmental entity...” MCA 9 2-9-305(2).

10 Some language in that statute may be confusing, because the title and content of MCA 2-9-11 305(1) refers to “immunization”. That immunization does not refer to immunity being granted to 12 the state; it refers to immunizing the employee from personal liability for defense costs and 13 damages, by the state’s acknowledging and paying such costs (instead of the employee or agent 14 paying them). For a discussion of the interaction of the constitutional waiver of sovereign
15 immunity and the Montana Tort Claims Act, see, State v. District Court, 175 Mont. 63, 572 P.2d 16 201 (1977).

17
18 SB 262 grants new immunity to the State and its agents. The immunity provisions of SB 19 262 would therefore constitute an amendment of this constitutional provision, and require a 2/3
20 vote of each house of the legislature. It did not receive a 2/3 vote of either legislative body.
21 Therefore, the immunity provision is void for failure of passage as required by Article II, §18.

23 The State and Tribes seem to argue this was not intended to grant the State immunity. The 24 legislative history demonstrates otherwise. As Plaintiffs correctly point out in their brief (p.29):
25

26 ///

1 "The argument is further bolstered by the Legislature's conduct during the 2015
2 session.

3 "In order to address the question and eliminate any ambiguity, the Legislature had 4 several options. For example, it could have simply included in SB 262's text that Montana's
5 general immunity laws applied; it could have included the Montana immunity laws in their 6 entirety in SB 262's text; it could have provided in SB 262's text that the State is responsible 7 for the conduct of its agents as set forth in Mont. Code Ann. § 2-9-305 (including the WMB, 8 etc.) and/or it could have simply eliminated three words "or the State" from the Compact.
9 However, none of those things happened. In fact, the Legislature actually declined to amend 10 SB 262 to eliminate those three words.

11 "On April 15, 2015, Representative Jeff Essman proposed a simple amendment to SB 12 262 to remove three words: "or the State". Exhibit 3b. He supported a 2/3 vote in order to 13 pass SB 262. Id. pg. 4, ll. 6-7. Representative Essman recognized that water rights are a 14 valuable, vested property right. Roland v. Davis, 2013 MT 148, ¶ 24, 370 Mont. 327, 392 P.2d
15 91. And that if those rights are wrongfully taken from a party the State had effectively
16 insulated itself from responsibility via SB 262:

17 *"...I think there are a couple of things that need to be clear in this compact to 18 help resolve some of this fight. And number one is that if vested rights are present, 19 they're protected. And number two, if litigation becomes necessary, it needs to be clear
20 which court you go to...But here's my concern. Article II, Section 18 of the Montana 21 Constitution basically states that the State has no immunity from lawsuit unless the 22 legislature specifically acts to create it. This language, I fear, can be argued to create 23 an immunity from lawsuit for actions for money damages, costs or attorney's fees.
24 That is why I felt a two-thirds vote was necessary. Ultimately, that issue will probably 25 be decided by the courts. But you know, I'm not sure that the claim of vested rights are 26 going to hold up...I'm not sure that a takings of a water right will occur, but it might.
And if those two things happen, that injured party needs to have redress against the State of Montana for the damages of [sic] the taking that's occurred. This language could be used to deny that claim and, therefore, I think we should strike the words "or the State" so that it's clear the State cannot assert an affirmative defense for a takings claim. Exhibit 3b, pg. 3, ll. 18-25 and pg. 4, ll. 1-20. "*

"The House of Representatives voted outright to decline this simple amendment which would have addressed Representative Essman's concern. Exhibit 5. Instead, it passed SB 262 knowing full well of the lack of redress available to a party for claims such as a taking or tort claim."

1 The statute language granting a new immunity to the state is clear. Even if others argue
2 there is ambiguity or the statute is capable of a different interpretation, the legislative history
3 provides clear evidence that immunity was, in fact, the purpose of the immunity language.

4 The Tribes' Arguments

6 1. The statute grants immunity to the Water Management Board (Board), which is 7 created by the water compact agreement. The board is not a political subdivision
8 of the State of Montana, so Article II, §18 is not violated.

9 The Tribes are correct that Article II, §18 only waives sovereign immunity for the state and 10 its political subdivisions ("The state, counties, cities, towns and all other local governmental 11 entities..." Interestingly, at oral argument, the Tribes and State had different answers to the 12 question of whether the Board could be sued in state court for damages. The State contended it 13 could; the Tribes contended it could not. This illustrates the amorphous nature of the board. If it is 14 not a subdivision of the Tribes, or a tribal member, it is hard to understand why it could not be 15 sued in state court, like any other non-governmental entity, for tortious conduct of its members, 16 agents and employees. On the other hand, if, as the State contends, state courts have jurisdiction
17 over the Board, it is hard to understand why this jurisdiction would not extend to monetary 18 lawsuits.

19 This Court need not wander through the cornrows of that esoteric question. The State has 20 control over the members of the Board which only the State can appoint and control. Those 21 appointees are given the power to hire engineers and other staff who would be acting in the course
22 of their agency, doing the work of the State if they engage in tortious or other wrongful conduct
23 while exercising the considerable power transferred to them by this statute. The State is liable 24 therefore, both by common law and statute. State v. District Court, supra, at 66; MCA 2-9-305.

- 25 2. A statute is presumed to be constitutional.

26 The Tribes's authority is correct. There is a presumption the statute is constitutional, and courts are to interpret the statute, where possible, so that it does not violate the constitution.
However, this maxim of statutory construction is employed where the statute is capable of two or more meanings, one of which is constitutional.

1 In interpreting a statute, "... the intention of the legislature is to be pursued in possible.
2 When a general and particular provision is inconsistent, the latter is paramount to the former, so a
3 particular intent will control a general one that is inconsistent with it." MCA 1-2-102. Provision
4 #2 above is not capable of more than one interpretation. There is no inconsistency between the 5 general and particular intent of the legislature. The clear meaning of the language grants immunity 6 to the Board, the State and the State's appointees and agents. The intent is clearly to grant immunity, which is evidenced by the legislative history.

7 3. If one or both immunity provisions are unconstitutional, each should be severed
8 from the statute, rather than void the entire statute.

9 The Court agrees with the Tribes on this point, and grants partial summary judgment to the 10 Tribes and the State, and declares that the unconstitutional immunity provision can be voided without voiding the entire statute.

11 § 1-1-113(1) of the Administration Ordinance provides that the provisions "... are 12 severable and a finding of invalidity of one or more provisions shall not affect the validity of the 13 remaining provisions."

14 This immunity provision does not appear to be central or pivotal in the overall compact
15 scheme. If the State contends it was, following final determination, the State can pass a curative 16 statute and withdraw from the compact, an outcome that appears doubtful. If the Tribes or federal 17 government contend it is not severable, all they have to do is decline to act legislatively to adopt the Compact.

18 The State's Arguments

19 1. A statute is presumed to be constitutional.

20 This argument was addressed above.

21 2. Plaintiffs lack standing to bring this suit, because there is not a justiciable
22 controversy ripe for decision.

23 This argument was largely decided by the Order Denying State's Motion to Dismiss herein, 24 filed December 2, 2015.

25 The State is engaged in implementing the compact pursuant to the newly-passed statute, 26 and has authorized or committed $3,000,000 toward that end.

1 The State may be correct, that Congress and the Tribes may not ratify the compact for many
2 years or ever. However, that argument raises the real-world situation of the State going forward
3 with costly implementation, and an indefinite period of uncertainty for Plaintiffs and other water
4 users, absent Court determination of these and other issues. It is not in the best interests of the 5 water users or other citizens of the various governments that such uncertainty continue for years or 6 decades.

7 This case meets the three-part test in Lee v. State, 195 Mont. 1, 6, 625 P.2d 1282, 1288
8 (1981).

9 This case is similar to Reichert v. State, 2012 MT 111, ¶53, 365 Mont. 92, 278 P.3d 455.
10 Plaintiffs sought declaratory judgment to declare a certain legislative-created ballot referendum, if 11 passed in the following election, would be unconstitutional, and sought injunctive relief to 12 decertify it before the election. The Montana Supreme Court held there was a justiciable, ripe 13 controversy and that the courts did not have to wait until after a referendum passed for there to be 14 sufficient legal harm to render the dispute ready for judicial determination.
15

16 Defendant also relies on the 1948 case of Chovanak v. Mathews, 120 Mont. 520, 188 P.2d
17 582 (1948), a case so old that the Montana Attorney General defending the case has since retired
18 from the Montana practice of law, as has his son and grandson. The plaintiff sought declaratory 19 judgment about a 1932 law which allowed certain slot machines if they were operated by religious,
20 fraternal or charitable organizations. Plaintiff contended the law was unconstitutional because it
21 discriminated on the basis of class. The case was dismissed for lack of a justiciable controversy, 22 though today it would more likely have been dismissed for lack of standing. Plaintiff had no
23 interest in slot machines, didn't intend to own one, and had never been denied a license for one.
24 He apparently just disliked slot machines generally. He was found to have suffered no past or
26

1 prospective harm. By comparison, the Plaintiffs here have alleged harm to their property interests,
2 specific to them (as members of the joint board of control, individual irrigators, and persons who 3 apparently claim to own an affected water right or a cause of action to claim a water right).

4 3. The first provision at issue is a limited waiver of sovereign immunity; new 5 immunity language does not constitute a new grant of immunity to the state.
6 The Court agrees with this analysis, and grants partial summary to the State.

7 4. The second provision at issue does not apply to political subdivisions of the 8 state, and therefore Article II, §18 is not violated.

9 This argument was addressed above. The argument may be correct, as far as it goes. But it
10 does not address the grant of immunity to the state for the actions of its appointees and agents.

11 5. Any unconstitutional provisions should be severed, pursuant to case law
12 precedent and the severability language in Administrative Ordinance § 1-1-13 113.

14 The Court agrees with the State on this point for the reason explained above, and grants 15 partial summary judgment therefore.

16 ORDER

17 Partial summary judgment is GRANTED and DENIED, and Declaratory Judgment is 18 entered as follows:

19 1. Partial summary judgment is GRANTED to Plaintiffs. Declaratory Judgment shall 20 issue, that SB 262 is unconstitutional, in violation of Article II, §18 of the 1972
21 Montana Constitution, to the extent of the following provision (provision #2 above):

22 1-2-111. Immunity from Suit. Members of the Board, the
23 Engineer, any Designee, any Water Commissioner appointed pursuant
24 to Section 3-1-114 of this Ordinance, and any Staff shall be immune
25 from suit for damages arising from the lawful discharge of an official 26 duty associated with the carrying out of powers and duties set forth in the Compact or this Ordinance relating to the authorization,
administration or enforcement of water rights on the Reservation.

- 1 2. Partial summary judgment is GRANTED to the State and Tribes as to the 2 severability of the provision above.
3 3. Except as granted above, each Party's Summary Judgment Motion is 4 DENIED.
5 4. Each party prevailed in part. Each party shall pay its own costs and
